

Self Storage Savings

Often, self storage units seem quite pricey to me. I frequently think, "Why do people save all of this junk in the first place?" However, self storage units can actually help you save a lot of money in the long term if you're a business owner, especially if you are relocating or refurbishing an office space. Consider this...you own a business that is either moving to another place or opening up a new branch. All of that office furniture could be sold, and new could be purchased, or a reasonable amount of money could be spent to utilize self storage during the move. Did you know that the average cost of an office cubicle is over one thousand dollars? A self storage unit can be leased for several months for the price of one new cube. If each employee got a new cubicle, it would amount to tens of thousands of dollars for an average sized office. It would have only cost a few hundred dollars to store your office furniture in a self storage unit for a few months and reuse it at the completion of your move.

Another situation in which a self storage unit would be helpful is in making bulk purchases. Perhaps it costs one thousand dollars per cubicle if you only purchase one or two cubes, but if you purchase twenty, they are significantly less. If you knew, for example, that you would be opening a new branch in another city in a few months time, you could purchase many cubes and store the unneeded ones in a self storage unit for a few months, and still have saved a good amount of money in the long run by purchasing the furniture in bulk.

There is actually a lot of savings to be had in using self storage units. There are a multitude of ways in which creative business owners can put self storage to use. When used in an inventive way, self storage units can save you a lot of money over purchasing brand new items. Also, they can aid a business in saving money by permitting you to purchase goods in bulk and store the unused portion until they are needed.
